Use of recipes is used as an ingredient in the elaboration table to produce: Quantum Storage is a new way of storing a large number of articles in several containers. The cuStical barrel may contain an almost unlimited amount of a single article. And you can get all those elements at the same time or if you keep the change and right click, you can get one at the same time. There are also a variety of boxes that contain a variable amount of articles depending on the level. The articles also retain inside the boxes when they are destroyed and can even be carried and placed in other places. You can also store an increase in lumps in the cuatic tank. Simply release whatever from the outside and check the storage capacity by clicking with an empty hand. And there are also cuantic bags in a variety of colors. These remain in their inventory and have a massive amount of articles, so they will expand their inventory exponentially. DownloadForuminstal Guide Quantum Storage, 3.73 / 5 (26 votes) QuantumStorage is a mod of gigabit101 with art of Nexans20 and Themattabase. In addition, a multitude of articles designed to store large amounts of articles. External links quantumstorage on github quantumstorage on cursls forge of the curseic mineral is born in the world and can be extracted. Other cuantic blocks (b/locks) always require cual dust (or an ingredient of manufacturing that in itself requires cuStical dust). When a Minecraft world is created with the QCraft mod installed, the cuasic mineral is naturally generated in a similar way to the red stone ore (in the 16 lower layers of the Minecraft world), but it is more veard, appearing appearing just four times per piece instead of eight. From version 1.01 of the MOD, it is possible to deactivate the generation of cucarum ore in the configuration settings. The cuasic mineral can be extracted with a peak of Or better. When extracted, it drops the quantum dust in a way similar to Redstone. Quantum dust falls from quantum ore. In version 1.01 and later, if enabled in the configuration, it is also possible to enable enable enable Creation³ quantum powder by combining a single unit³ reddish with lime green dye. It is recommended that users enable this setting³ as the generation of quantum ore is disabled during global creation³ otherwise there is no path to create quantum elements. Quantum Dust is used to create the following elements:³ essence (EoS) Entanglement essence (EoE) Observation essence (EoO³O) Observation essence (EoO³ O) is an elaborate item that itself has no function but is used as an ingredient in³ recipes to imbue other articles made with the quantum behavior. It is made by combining four units of Wet Powder as follows: Ingredients Input³ Output Wet Powder Like EoO, Observation Essence (EoS³ is a processing ingredient³ used in certain recipes of³. It's also made from quantum powder as follows: Ingredients Input³ Output Quantum powder As EoS and EoO, EoE is a³ ingredient used in certain recipes for³ processing. It is also made of quantum dust and EoS as follows: Ingredients Input³ Quantum Dust Output The essence of the Overlay Observer-dependent blocks (ODBs)³ exhibit properties of any non-fluid, non-inferior Minecraft standard block used in its construction, but only when observed in certain ways. ODBs are made by placing EoO in the central slot of the manufacturing table and then placing the standard Minecraft blocks around it. The position³ of the blocks in the creation grid determines how the ODB will be resolved when it is first observed in the following way³ Let's see the following example: In this case, once the resulting ODB is placed in the world, it will appear as a stone 100% of the time if its north or south face is first observed, its eastern face is observed, it will always appear as red and if its western face is the first observed it will always appear as dirt. If the top or bottom face is the first observed, it will remain invisible and permeable (as if there were no block). The SDGs can be made with Redstone blocks. This makes it possible to feed the constructions in Minecraft as of dependency. Effects that can be achieved with ODBs³ Phasing — leaving a blank directional space in the brewing recipe² the block will be invisible and permeable when resolved to the state represented by the³ CamaleAn vac slot — the ODB block will be resolved to a standard minecraft block when viewed from the³ direction. Ae iChameleonAe Blocks acquire several characteristics of the blocks to which they are resolved, such as: flammability appearance transparency element drops required mining tools SeA:ales redstone (if manufactured with a redstone block, transmit one seA:to the redstone) Light source (e.g., glowing stone) Gravity i ODBs will fall without support if resolved to a block affected by gravity (e.g. sand) , gravel).³ This block is designed similarly to the standard OBD, except that EoS is used in the preparation of recipes instead of EoO, as in: Consider the following example: In this case, once the resulting QB is placed in the world, it will appear as stone 100% of the time if its north or south face is the first one observed. If your east or west face is the first one observed, you will have the possibility of appearing as dirt and the possibility of appearing as gravel. If the upper or lower face is the first to be observed, remain invisible and permeable (as if there were no block). As this example indicates, the rules for determining how³ resolves to a QB at the first observation³ are as follows: 1. Determine the axis on which the block is first observed (picket with the "silk touch" enchantment)³ Glass blocks 2. Each one resolves the other when it is observed from a different cardinal direction³ otherwise it resolves to the obsidian. call these the " anchor ODBA sAe A. 3. Craft the quantum computer (qC) (see Quantum Computer, above) Choose an area to quantify In the center, place the qC adjacent to a block of ice to provide cooling³ In the perMeter, build 4 Obsidian and ODB Towers along each Cartesian axis (N, S, E, W), aligned with the qC. The tower must be anchored by the ODBAe A anchor, which must be at the same level as the QC. The anchoring ODBs must be placed in such a way that the face of the gold block Ae A resolves Ae A in the direction³ of the area to be quantified. The total area to be quantified can be extended up to 16* blocks on either side of the anchoring ODBs on the x, y and z axes. Place a single block of glass at the top of each pillar (this is important so that the device does not violate Special Relativity) If you want to teleport, recreate the exact same matrix at the destination location³ using the paired tangled QC. If you want to quantize, recreate exactly the same array at the target location³ but do not place a QC there. *The maximum number of blocks that the quantization field can extend can³ be configured in the qcraft configuration file³ The default is 8.5. Use Quantum Equipment Right-click³ QC to access a GUI Select Quantize or 6a. If quantifies, extract and collect QC. Transport it to the destination location, place it inside the matrix and access the QC/Ae A s menu to quantify, 6 ter. If teleported, the contents of the two matrices are instantly exchanged. Place two of the anchor SDGs on the ground (or wherever you want the basis of the portal framework) with at least two  empty spaces between them. Place glass blocks in each of the two empty spaces left in step 2, place in three glass blocks at the top of each of the anchor ODBs you placed in step 2. Place an anchor ODB at the top of each of the top glass blocks you placed in step 4, Place two more glass blocks between the ODBs you placed in step 5. Now you should have a complete frame made of glass with ODB at each corner. Place a quantum computer (without entanglement) next to the portal frame. Place a block of ice adjacent to the quantum computer (to provide cooling). The maximum number of glass blocks, determining the maximum size of the portal, can be configured in the qcraft configuration file. The default is 5. For the minimum size of the portal, the completed construction should look like this: Setting up portal links and activating portals Please note, according to the above, that not all users may have permission to set portal links on a certain server. In the "This Portal" field, enter a unique name for this particular portal (e.g., "Mushroom Beach" or "Mushroom Beach"). If you do not want to set a destination, you can click Escape at this point (the name you entered will be saved). If you want to configure a destination, enter the name of the destination portal in the corresponding field. If your destination is on the same server, leave the option A A on this server A A enabled. If your destination is on a different server, click the On this server button to browse a list of servers to which connections are allowed. Once the configuration is complete, click on Energize A A A to activate the Portal. The portal will now glow green to indicate your Active: Although the portals can have only one destination at a given time, the portal system allows a variety of different configurations: if you configure a portal according to the above, it represents a unidirectional sustained tide between that portal and its destination portal. Since qCraft uses the non-localized name of the item, e.g., "minecraft-stone", to determine a match since qCraft 1.2.2, the item does not on another item on the other server plus if both numeric ID maps of the server do not match. However, it is still possible that the target server completely lacks the item or block you are carrying with you. This may be due to the different configurations of a mod, or because the target server lacks a full mod. Before qCraft 1.2.2, this would normally cause an error and lose most or all of the other items that I was bringing to that server as well, without any means of recovery. In most inter-server travels, this item will not be relevant, but for special cases where it is, there is the Lost Item Container element. The lost items container is an item that is automatically created when a player loads an item to a server that has a "unique name" that does not match the name of any of the items loaded on that server at that time. The MIC contains all the information about the original item and if the lost items container is taken to another server via a portal, it will be converted back to the original item's information before it travels. If the original item does not exist on that new target server, the item will naturally be wrapped in a new MIC. Reasons for using a portal between servers may fail The user's client cannot connect to the target server (this will likely result in a "Connection Rejected" error and the user will end up in the main menu) The target server is not running or is unreachable The target server is running (ot versions of) mods that you do not have installed on your client The target server user is not allowed to access the target server The target server is running a different version of the qCraft mod The target portal does not exist or is not active (this will cause the user to be transported to the server destination but to its default location³instead of the bottom of the destination portal) The connection between servers has not been verified (todavAa³ (todavAa
